	Department consider it impossible to bring the Cauvery water to these tanks. In November 1893, when Mr. McHutchin, Assistant Chief Engineer, inspected the Malavalli, Marahalli and the Marcall tanks, he was of opinion that water could be brought to the Marcall tank from the Chikadevarayasagara nala. The distance from Malavalli to Aravatige Koppal, where the branch channel is intended to be cut from the Chikadevarayasagar channel, is about 20 or 22 miles, while that from Marcall tank to the said Aravatige Koppal is 15 miles. The Malavalli and Marahalli tanks being close to the Marcall tank, it is possible to fill them with the Chikadevarayasagara channel water. This proposal will, if carried out, not only encourage wet cultivation but also supply the town of Malavalli with water.
Subject No. 526. Anicut across the waste weir of the Malavalli tank. Mr. Shanbhog Ramaiya and Mr. Shanbhog Narasimha Murti of Malavalli Taluk.	Since the anikat across the waste weir of the Malavalli tank and the Kodihalla water was washed away, the water of the tank and the Kodihalla has been running to waste and damaging the crops. The Public Works Department prepared a project three or four years ago, but the work has not yet been put in hand.

Near Thorekadanahalli the Shimsha river crosses the Bangalore-Mysore high road. The current being rapid, carts and passengers find it difficult to cross the river, which may therefore be bridged.
